In our comments, in Thursday's issue, on the recent escape of a prisoner from Victoria Gaol, we find that we were misinformed on some points and hasten therefore to make the amendo honorable. We were led to be lieve that the prisoner CHAN AYAU was employed in light household duties about the Superintendent's quarters, and that he escaped by lowering himself from a window there into the Magistracy compound. We find that neither the escapee nor any other prisoner is or has been employed in any household duties in or about the Superintendent's quarters, and that no prisoner has ever been allowed inside those quarters during Major-General Gordon's occupation of them. The facts of the case are that the prisoner was left unwatched for a few minutes after being unlocked in the morning, and that he took prompt advantage of this freedom from observation to climb up by a grating on to the verandah of the Superintendent's quarters, to run round this veraudah, and lower himself by a rope from another part of it to the ground outside the Gaol walls. It is apparent from this explanation that long sentenced prisoners are not, as we had previously concluded, employed in light labour in the Superintendent's quarters. The fact that an escape from the Gaol has been possible at all, however, points, as we have before said, to some defects in the arrangements, either of the building itself or of the guard kept over the prisoners. The mode of escape adopted by Chan Ayau will now course be provided against, and his unexpected departure will likewise, we doubt not, lead to a thorough examination of all the possible ways of escaping that may present themselves. The lasson taught by the escape is the paramount importance of maintaining a constant and sleepless watch on the movements of the convicts. It is not every criminal who possesses either the head to conceive or the nerve to carry out so daring or cowardly but the clever and audacious. the water, and a verdict of "found drowned." the nations of the West who suffer the most from these practices, is confirmatory of the suggestion. is certain that the debauched life which such large numbers live while in these lands, can have no good influence on themselves or others; and it seems quite possible that it may have had a considerable influence in fostering similar practices at home. It may be one of the unexpected retributions of the Allpervading Power which works for Righteousness, and which cannot allow sinning nations, any more than sinning individuals, to escape retribution. If these Western immoralities are, as some assert, more outrageous even than those in heathen lands, it is but what is to be expected, that deflections from our own higher, Christian, standards, would produce degrees of infamy and viloness more despicable than is perhaps possible among people of lower knowledge and light. Then follow some moral reflections as to the opposing powers of good and evil with which we need not now specially concern ourselves. The relations of the sexes is a subject on which many thoughtful men, and men who themselves lead pure lives, entertain very diverse views. It is not our intention to enter on a detailed consideration of these, but it must be obviouseven to the mos- austere purist, if he can bring himself to think calmly for a few moments, that the practice which prevails amongst some unmarried foreigners in China of entering into temporary relations with native females, each party remaining

Mr. STEAD, the Editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, and the director of the unsavoury Private Commission, together with number of his confederates, male and female, are charged with the abduction of a little girl named ELIZA ARMSTRONG, and from the evidence given before the Police Court, there is, we fear, little doubt of their guilt. There is this to be said in their favour, however, that the child was treated with kindness and with due regard for her welfare. The object appears to have been to obtain a child who could be paraded as a girl saved from moral destruction. The case was one of which much was made in the Pall Mall Gazette, but it now appears that so far from the child having been parted with by her parents for immoral purposes, she was obtained from them deceived in the matter must be left an open it is clear that he was guilty of very grave indiscretion, to say the least of it, and the ceeding." whole case throws a clear light on the
